Artists Deborah Holowka (Vancouver, Canada) and Thomas van Wagensveld (Amsterdam, Netherlands) are proud to present new works from their second collaboration project entitled, Crazy Honest.

While exhibiting at the 2007 Florence Biennale, Holowka and van Wagensveld were inspired to collaborate and have since found common ground behind their art creation process. Says Holowka, "Without context, art is often meaningless so we are very disciplined to record and document the collaborative process so as to unveil the meaning behind it."

Crazy Honest is meant to express an innocent yet profound message that behind the mask of living, we are all a little crazy and in order survive, we need to give up the lies and accept our truths - body, mind, and soul.

The sensitive nature of the subject matter from this exhibition bears a truth both artists embrace which is to deconstruct their lives in order to construct and find their identity. This affirms the goal of Holowka and van Wagensveld as collaborators which is to create art with a purpose.
